

Connected care and the future of healthcare

How can connected care and digital technologies accelerate us towards the future health system? Innovation and development in medical technologies and digitalization moves forward at a very fast pace. This is crucial in order to transform healthcare to meet the challenges it is facing, with a growing and aging population living with chronic disease.

How fast and disruptive is the technological development and where are the greatest advancements? Johan Folkunger, Managing Director of Philips Health Systems Sweden, gives fresh insights into Med Tech innovations and gives a sneak peek at what's around the next corner.